prizes to be won!

We have two of these revolutionary storage devices - worth £149.99 each - to give away

Getting information on and off your PC these days is much more complicated than simply inserting a floppy disk and copying files to and fro. The vast majority of information is stored on CDs or DVDs, but if you want to transfer information to your PC from a digital camera, there are also the many different memory card formats to take into account.

The ATMT Group believes it has the answer to all these format problems with its new hardware solution, the MediaTank. The device comes with a built-in external hard drive (with capacities ranging from 80GB up to 500GB), a CD writer or dual-layer DVD writer, and a 10-in-1 memory card reader capable of handling virtually every storage format currently available. The device is housed in a sturdy external casing and connects to PC via a USB 2.0 connection. It even sports its own fan and heatsink to ensure its integrated components keep cool.

For more details on the MediaTank, visit www.atmtgroup.co.uk. The device is available in a range of models, depending on the specific components you require, and prices start from £149.99. The MediaTank is on sale now from at all good electronics retailers and online stores.

PC Utilities has teamed up with the ATMT Group to give two lucky readers their own 80GB MediaTank. To enter, all you need to do is answer the question below and send your entry to us by 4 August 2005. Alternatively, email your answer to comp@pc-utilities.co.uk, putting 'ATMT competition' in the subject line.
